Accommodation at Keble

We guarantee accommodation onsite at Keble for three years of your course and it is of a very high standard. All of our rooms are single and of a decent size—the vast majority are ensuite and have also been recently refurbished. You have to live here at Keble in your first year but you can choose to live out and rent privately in any or all of the later years of your course if you prefer, though this tends to be more expensive (and so not very common). Rooms for first year undergraduates are allocated by the Accommodation Manager, though incoming students may express a preference for type of room. Second year and third year students choose their room by a ballot system operated by the student body.

People often think that living in Oxford will mean spending a lot of money on rent but since we are able to offer three years in student accommodation at Keble this is not the case.

Room rents at Keble are also fixed for three years, so there won’t be any shocks during your time here.

The price ranges shown below are per year (3-term contract at c 27 weeks in total) for students starting in 2022. Our rooms do vary in some ways, so the rates reflect this.

- Like the idea of your own private bathroom?
- Fancy a view of a Keble quad and not the outside world?
- Need a lot of space for all your stuff?

If so you can pay a little bit more for each of these extras. Once you receive your offer you’ll be able to express a preference. We can’t always guarantee everyone their first choice—but we do our best.

One of the perks of studying at Oxford is that you don’t have to worry about cooking your own meals. This is particularly helpful when you’re extra busy with studying, clubs and societies, etc.

Keble students can have breakfast, lunch and dinner in the dining hall every day if they want to. We also have a café and a pizza bar onsite in case they fancy something a bit different. We aim to cater for all dietary requirements.

Everything you choose to eat and drink is added to your online account using your university card and you have to pay for what you’ve had at the end of each term. You can pay more frequently if you prefer. There are no upfront termly or yearly fixed charges for meals at Keble—meaning you only pay for what you actually have. Keble also puts on three optional formal evening meals per week. Students who come often say that it’s a good chance to catch up with friends or meet new people, but they also enjoy the opportunity to wear academic gowns and have their food served to them.

You can bring visitors along to eat at Keble and what they have will be charged to your online account using your university card. If you’d like to take someone to a formal evening meal you just have to book a place for them online in advance.

Students are free to go and eat in town or elsewhere within the university—but this can be more expensive. Most first year rooms also have fridges and students are allowed microwaves and kettles as well so that’s always a back-up option but there aren’t usually proper cooking facilities until third year.
